INTRODUCTION

Many experts divide tourism resources into levels and assess these levels as a priority or lower priority in tourism. Innovative activities and approaches are essential for the effective performance of tasks in the service¹. For example, in order to develop tourism in certain countries, the first parties prioritize international tourism in this country and the diversity and attractiveness of tourism facilities and resources in this country. This is a very accurate conclusion.

On the other hand, for the development of tourism in a country, well-known accommodation resources (hotels, restaurants), transport system, tourist routes and services on these tourist routes, excursion services on the routes meet the requirements of the perfect world. Especially in 2019, the coronavirus pandemic that spread from China to the rest of the world caused great damage to the world economy².

Without denying the above, the third party believes that the development of tourism is the provision of excellent services in the field of tourism in a particular country. It is also worth noting that a well-established tourism management in the country will lay the foundation for the development of tourism in this country, and the rest can be developed.

As tourism is a complex socio-economic sector, it is possible to prioritize each direction of tourism. It really should be so. However, the development of tourism in a particular country depends primarily on the fact that the first tourist resources in tourism combine diversity and antiquity, mystery, splendor, miracle, history and other similar features.

If the tourist resources in the countries are of international importance, if this resource is known in the countries of our planet, the international tourist flow will start to enter this country and vice versa. Therefore, when the above-mentioned tourism resources function for the same purpose, perfectly, tourism in a particular country will develop at the expected level. Therefore, the use of tourism resources or the development of tourism resources in the development of tourism should be placed in the following sequence:

1. Tourist resources are all anthropogenic (man-made) and natural objects (natural geographical area, flora, fauna, biodiversity, unique natural landscapes, climatic features, resorts, etc.) that attract tourists.
2. Tourist accommodation resources - places or houses where tourists spend the night, hotels, tourist camps, rental houses, etc.
3. Catering resources for tourists - kitchens, bars, restaurants, teahouses, cafes.
4. Resources that provide transport services to tourists - all vehicles, local modes of transport.

The main reason for the brief focus on tourism resources in this chapter is to identify and forecast opportunities for tourism development based on the study of the availability (scarcity, abundance, international or local significance) of tourism resources in research areas or administrative territories of the state. Second, the use of tourism resources mentioned in the formation of the article or the possibility of creating these resources, the priorities for use in planning tourism will be developed.

When we analyze the number and activity of tourist flows around the world, so far, the number of tourists visiting ancient, historical monuments is second, recreational tourism is second and pilgrimage tourism is third. Over the past five years, eco-tourism has been gaining the status of secular tourism, according to periodicals and international media.

So, before studying the possibilities of developing ecological and recreational types in our country, it is important to know the essence of these types of tourism, to analyze the current state of development of these types of tourism in our country.
